ALAN SEABORN

Alan Seaborn is a gifted speaker who is committed to communicating messages of hope that help to create harmony within families. Incorporating scripture and knowledge from the world around him, Alan shares about things he believes are close to God's heart—our attitudes and the decisions we make as viewed through the lens of a family. This includes addressing issues such as finding common ground, focusing on doing the little things right, and recognizing that the choices people make in the present will become the legacy they will leave in the future.

Alan earned his degree in Pastoral Ministries from Indiana Wesleyan University. Since then, he has spoken at youth camps, weekend retreats, fundraising events, chapels, and corporate events. With experience in a variety of speaking environments, Alan has had the opportunity to hone his speaking skills to meet people at their point of felt need.

Alan is the author of two books. "Journeying with Pain" is a book he wrote for people living with a chronic or unfixable situation or medical condition and "Marriage: Five Years Later" was written to help married couples in the early years of marriage think about what it takes to join two lives together.

Alan and his wife live in West Michigan with their two dogs, Russell and Mac.
